Congrats to those who got yesterday's #VotofKnowledge trivia question correct. In 2003, the largest power outage in North American history affected over 50 million people throughout a wide swath of territory in the U.S. and Canada - including New York City, Toronto, Ottawa, Cleveland, Detroit, and many areas in between. None of those affected areas were Xcel Energy territories, and on average, customers in our eight-state region had consistent, reliable electric power 99.9% of the time last year.
